

Growing Leasing & Marketing in the Santa Clarita Valley

Where GHP's proven marketing models meet an under-utilized local market and a working proof designed for the modern consumer.

Domingo Claudio · Leasing Consultant, The Village Apartment Homes

I lease at The Village. On my own time, I developed a marketing and outreach campaign intended to treat the Santa Clarita portfolio as its own growth market. This brief lays out where the opportunity is and shows what's been built to prove execution, as a live product prospects can use.

01 / THE OPPORTUNITY

A campus market on our doorstep that no one is marketing to

Santa Clarita has established itself as a mini college town. College of the Canyons, The Master's University, and CalArts cycle thousands of students and adjunct faculty every year.

Enrollment at these schools outruns on-campus housing every year; College of the Canyons offers none at all. That leaves thousands who need housing near campus with a fixed window to find it.

The play is marketing-led demand generation: relationships with campus housing offices, targeted on-campus placement, and outreach built for faculty and staff as well as students. Year-round tenants, not just the August-to-May cycle. Out-of-state and international students widen the reach further. Coordinated marketing events for these campuses complete the motion, each designed to convert to signed leases.

GHP already runs this model in DTLA: Lorenzo's marketing is built around campus outreach at the USC cluster. The SCV campuses are the natural next development of a model the company already believes in.

The campus marketing motion benefits every SCV community. For the larger housing-partnership conversation, the portfolio maps by scale, unit mix and proximity. Park Sierra leads that list: the most units in the portfolio, the widest range of bedroom styles for roommate accommodation, and garages that matter to commuting faculty and staff. Final property-matching should follow current exposure and availability data.

02 / THE PROOF

I didn't write a plan for a product. I shipped one.

I built a mobile-first prospect web app for The Village. Prospects filter floor plans, explore amenities, book a tour or request contact, and every submission carries the specific unit and a reference code straight into our lead pipeline. It installs to a phone's home screen and shares by QR code:

I designed and executed this app unprompted, outside my leasing role. It is the clearest evidence I can offer that I turn a marketing idea into a working tool, not a slide.

And it's a template, not a one-off. The same system is built to extend to any SCV community. One property is the proof; the portfolio is the opportunity.

03 / THE SYSTEM

Marketing you can actually measure

The app keeps us competitive in both market reach and scalability. Every prospect touch can be tagged to its source with the proper QR code tracker. Each avenue gets measured, and spend is reinvested where it converts.

Built from the leasing floor. Ready for the marketing team.
