

Growing Leasing & Marketing in the Santa Clarita Valley

Where GHP's proven marketing models meet an under-utilized local market and a working proof designed for the modern consumer.

01 / THE OPPORTUNITY

A campus market on our doorstep that's waiting to be acquired

Santa Clarita is home to several notable institutions, namely:

College of the Canyons: a massive community college with a huge local footprint.

California Institute of the Arts (CalArts): a world-renowned avant-garde art school.

The Master's University: a private faith-based institution.

Enrollment at these schools outruns on-campus housing. CoC offers none at all. Leaving thousands who need housing near campus with a fixed window to find it every year.

The play is marketing-led demand generation: relationships with campus housing offices, targeted on-campus placement, and outreach built for faculty and staff as well as students. Out-of-state and international students widen the reach further. Coordinated marketing events for these campuses complete the motion, each designed to convert to signed leases.

GHP already runs a similar model in DTLA: Lorenzo's marketing is built around campus outreach at the USC cluster. The SCV campuses are the natural next development of a model the company believes in.

The campus marketing motion benefits every SCV community: for the larger housing-partnership conversation, the portfolio maps by scale, unit mix and proximity. Park Sierra leads that list: most units in the portfolio, widest range of bedroom styles for roommate accommodation, and garages that matter to commuting faculty and staff. Final property-matching should follow current exposure and availability data.

02 / THE PROOF

Accommodating a Newer Generation of Renter

I built a mobile-first prospect web app for The Village. Prospects filter floor plans, explore amenities, book a tour or request contact, and every lead carries a specific unit and reference code straight into our lead pipeline. It installs to a phone's Home Screen and shares by QR code:

I designed and executed this app outside my leasing role to show the cleanest evidence of concept to working model. This model will be used for the other properties. Over the course of 12 months, the finished portfolio will look like this:

03 / THE SYSTEM

Marketing you can actually measure

The app keeps us competitive in both market reach and scalability. Every prospect touch can be tagged to its source with the proper QR code tracker. Each avenue gets measured, and spend is reinvested where it converts.

Built from the leasing floor. Ready for the marketing team.
